

What's Your Style ?

What's your distinction at work, and /or how are you going to get one?

Why are some companies or teams more successful than others? What really differentiates you or your brand in a crowded market? What is it that really us as individuals or collectively reach our potential, fulfill whatever our ambition is so that we can feel successful?

Disruptions and breakdowns, lack of motivation to be engaged and the retention of the right staff inside organizations is less to do with the things we blame non-performance on, and a lot more to do with a lack of quality social connections.

In the face of change and financial uncertainty as well as increased competition, what is there was a way for teams and organizations to work collaboratively and effectively? Imagine a team where each member responded insightfully to one another's best intentions, where each member has access to knowledge that would allow them to self-observe their own style-filters. This level of emotional and social intelligence is imperative in a diverse and complex work-world. Imagine a tool that can provide a way for each person to access their super-power so that everybody's strengths can be showcased to clients and appreciated by the team.

This fun and inspirational keynote provides understanding in to how to build team that will thrive in the competitive workplace just by knowing their own style.
