

Managing multi-generational workplaces

Do you find yourself in the same position, as many other organizations around the world, where there is not only a cohort of young adults playing by 'different' rules all around you, but your boss is younger than you are or worse, you are having to give instruction to somebody who looks like they may be the same age as your parents?

Do any of the organizational rules, values, ideas and structures really baffle or, worse, bug you?

Do you know there could be more employee engagement, more efficient communication, perhaps more trust amongst teams, fewer silos, more collaboration, more resilience, more responsibility taken, more sales made... whatever it may be that's blocking the organization from optimizing its potential, but you are just not quite sure how to get there?

This workshop on how to manage multi-generational workplaces, guides you towards insights on how to get the best out of each person, because of their generation and be tailor-made to use diverse generational perspectives to solve some of your other problems also. Proving that generational diversity makes a team stronger!
