

Meet the Millennial

reframe your vision for a new breed of employees

In the context of a competitive and transparent economy undergoing huge change •what is going to make you, your team or your organization stand out? •Why would your employees or your consumers stay loyal to you, your brand, your company or company 'rules'? •How are you going to know which rules for success need changing and which can remain the same? •Do you really understand your employees and your consumers in terms of how they communicate and connect based on their generation? •What motivates your talent? •What is the best way to retain good talent? •Does your organisational culture or environment inspire engagement from everyone with diverse perspectives?

Understanding that people have fundamentally different values and outlooks on life that are influenced by the era in which they were born, is to understand the use of generation theory in optimising diversity, creating employee engagement, navigating change, implementing company strategy or for fostering team collaboration inside organisations today. The Training Space delivers a fun history and then offers suggestions on what kind of environment to create and how by understanding generational perspectives.

Lots of fun and incredibly valuable.
