

WORKING in an Awakened Company

The impact of global change cannot be ignored by anybody, by any company or by any sector. It doesn't matter whether you are innovative start-up company or a global and established brand, life and business are unpredictable, which leaves people feeling uncertain. Saffron Baggallay at the Training Space focuses on how this global change might impacts people's productivity inside your business, specifically in terms of how they think, feel and behave.

Saffron is passionate about creating 'awakened companies' where people are the focus in collaborative communities for sustainable growth. An awakened company is one where people are self-motivated and responsible for playing their part in the organization's success, because they want to be there. Neuro-scientific research shows us that emotions drive our behaviour, which is why creating a context where are employees are 'awake' to themselves and others is imperative for your business to thrive.

Imagine working in a workplace where confident, articulate, self-reliant, solution-orientated, curious, creative, collaborative thinkers make up the majority of the workforce? This would facilitate the creation of a much more productive workplace, where employees are fully engaged.

Let me help you create the context.
